African American & Hispanic youth vulnerability to target marketing: Implications for understanding the effects of digital marketing

The report assesses the vulnerability of African American and Hispanic youth when targeted by digital marketing. The report highlights four key factors that may interact with marketing strategies and lead to ‘enhanced receptivity and responsiveness among ethnic minority groups.’ These included levels of ‘media exposure, content of targeted marketing, favourable response to marketing and ethnic identity concerns.’